His physician, for every man of any style must have a physician, had recommended a bloycle. If a had bought one on the installment plan, and at the time this narrative opens he was becoming a moderately expert rider. He was hustling down Main street to his cheap second-story home on the South Side when he saw the painter and his pots, crossing the street. The thought filted through his mind: 1 "Only a painter; what business has he to be in my way? Shall I ring my bell for him?" There was not much time for thought. He was almost upon him. The painter's mind was still on the weather-beaten house and he heard not the silent rubber tire as it rolled smoothiy over the beautiful brick street of which Wneeling is justly so proud. Nearer and nearer the wheelman came. Twas too late to sound the gong, so he turned suddenly to pass the nainter. The Burlington Route, C., B. & Q. In an hour burn after eating I would experience a fainness, or tired, all gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a Sour room with fresh paint. Last Stomach rilla—took there bettles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had preylously experienced."
